

AFPC Fellow for Russia Samuel Bendett weighs in on release of Russian military exoskeleton suit prototype

August 29, 2018

Related Categories: Military Innovation; Russia

Related Expert: Samuel Bendett

" According to Bendett the exercise demonstrates the Russian intention to put the world, and specifically the UnitedStates, on notice that they are again a world military power. Bendett explained the Russians haven't done a large scale exercise in many years, the potential to put 100,000 troops into the exercise speaks to their overall increased capability, as well as the specific progress made in command and control and logistics," writes Defense One's Patrick Tucker.

Click the link to read the full story!