

AFPC Senior Vice President Ilan Berman quoted in The Hill regarding challenges facing the U.S. with pending release of terror convicts

September 14, 2018

Related Categories: Islamic Extremism; Terrorism

Related Expert: Ilan I. Berman

"We look abroad at countries that are dealing with a similar situation, but at a much broader scale — most all of them uniformly have a program to try to reprogram and rehabilitate these individuals when they are in prison," he said. "To my knowledge, nothing of that exists in the U.S."

"You can extrapolate that the recidivism rate is going to be higher than it would be if we had such programs in place," he added.

Read the full article .