

AFPC Senior Fellow for National Security Alexander B. Gray quoted in Washington Examiner

June 15, 2021

Related Categories: Democracy and Governance; Military Innovation; Warfare; China; East Asia

Related Expert: Alexander B. Gray

Alexander B. Gray, a senior fellow specializing in national security at the American Foreign Policy Council, believes one way to keep China in check is to allow "the U.S. Coast Guard to play a larger role in preserving order in the Pacific."

"The recent appearance of a 200-ship Chinese 'fishing' flotilla in the South China Sea, loitering in Beijing-claimed waters and intimidating regional states, shows the urgency of addressing China's maritime predations," Gray said.

Read the rest of the article here.